

School Bulletin Friday 22nd November 2024

It has been a real pleasure to see so many of our parents and carers in school this past week to engage with teacher consultations. The partnership between school and home is key to ensuring our pupils gain the maximum benefits from their time in lessons and wider learning. It is very much a partnership. It was pointed out to me very early in my career that working in schools and achieving success comes down to one word – relationships – it is a real pleasure to have such a supportive and engaged community ready to build those relationships.

A massive thanks to Miss T. this week who has organised and run a very successful book fair. So many of our staff go above and beyond and I am please to say that we sold nearly £500 of books representing £130 increase on last year. As a result of your generosity we will receive nearly £200 back to spend on books. Look out for Miss T's post on Dojo soon.

Have a great weekend.

Nathan Cooper – Headteacher
